Field of the Invention This invention relates to a blowout preventer testing system and more particularly to a computerized blowout preventer (BOP) testing system for fluid containment and testing the sealing integrity of a BOP. 2. Description of the Related Art In the drilling of deep wells, it is common practice to pass the drill string of a drilling rig through a blowout preventer (BOP) and drill a borehole to a predetermined depth. Once the borehole has been drilled, conventional drilling techniques are used to complete a casing string and to connect the upper end of the casing string to the lower end of the drill string which includes a tubular drill bit. In order to isolate the formation which is being drilled or is being repaired in the event of an explosive formation, a temporary plug, also known as a whip plug, is passed through the BOP by lowering the whip plug into the well borehole. The whip plug seals off the well borehole and is then drilled out and removed from the well borehole. The BOP is then opened and the drilling string is lowered into the well borehole so that a cementing operation may be conducted in the well borehole. After the cementing operation is completed, the drilling string is withdrawn from the well borehole and the BOP is closed and inspected for any damage. It is important that the BOP be tested to insure that it is in good working order in the event that it is necessary to seal off the well borehole in order to conduct a cementing operation.

There is also a need to conduct similar testing 6d1f23a050
